AYER'S

CHERRY PECTORAL

For the Cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

THIS favorable combination of some of the most effectual remedies for the cure of pulmonary complaints ever known, has gained for it a reputation and sale unequalled by any other medicine in existence. Wherever its virtues are known, it is regarded as a remedy on which the afflicted may rely with confidence for relief, when relief is possible to be obtained. Many of the most eminent members of the medical profession have given certificates of its unrivalled excellence, and the public are no longer in doubt as to the best remedy to employ for the relief of the distressing and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs.

PERKINS, the venerable Patriot of the Connecticut Western Reserve, and one of the Pioneers of Ohio, writes from Cleveland, 14th January, 1851, that he has used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in his family for many years, and has found it the most reliable remedy for Coughs, Colds, Croup, Asthma, and Consumption, he has ever known. He says he would not be without it, if it could be obtained for love or money.

Rev. ELON GALUSHA, Pastor of the Second Baptist Church, Lowell, Mass., writes, 10th January, 1851, that he has been repeatedly relieved of Bronchitis, Hoarseness, and Clergyman's Sore Throat, by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and that he has found it the most effectual remedy for Coughs, Colds, and Hoarseness, with which he is acquainted.

Rev. JOSEPH CUMMINGS, Pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Lowell, Mass., writes, 10th January, 1851, that he has been relieved of Bronchitis, Hoarseness, and Clergyman's Sore Throat, by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and that he has found it the most effectual remedy for Coughs, Colds, and Hoarseness, with which he is acquainted

Governor's Message

The annual messages of the Governors of Maine are generally printed in all the newspapers, but perhaps not as generally read as such documents should be. These State papers are generally of importance, and they should be prepared with a very careful regard to the public welfare and all reference to the wisest suggestion and when so prepared they should be attentively read by the entire people of the State.

There is much in the message of the present year that is suggestive, and in this regard worthy of the closest attention.

After appropriately recognizing the blessings of heaven upon our beloved land and the duty of gratitude which we, as a people, owe to God reference is made to the violent agitation of the two years past on the subject of slavery and the dangers to the Union which impended, but which have been removed by the measures of adjustment and compromise to which Congress and the Executive were enabled to agree and in which the people as a whole, fully acquiesce, as a patriotic duty.

The message goes into an argument to show the practical results which must follow from the system of every man judging of his obligations to sustain or to disobey a law of the land according as he supposed such law was in agreement with, or violated his understanding of a higher law and to show the difficulties in ascertaining how that law would require men to act in the multiplied and changing relations of social life. It is easier to cavil at this portion of the message than fully and fairly to answer it. But it seems to us that the message does not give full credit to the sincerity and the rights of those who insist that the everlasting principles of equality in Publick and righteousness which the law of God presses upon the conscience and the heart of man shall also appear in the laws and practices of the State and not on and that every citizen is resolved from any obligation of obedience to any or usage which in any way infringes this higher law. This position is a radical one, and those who insist upon this standard for the government of man's internal spiritual life bear as fully expressed and acted upon in his political or social relations, for the man shall be absolved from all obligation to obey such laws and conform to such usage do indeed, declare as essence as some have in words the our political and social compact as an agreement which ought not stand and that the Union ought not to be dissolved, and this too if the fugitive slave law were unconditionally repealed. If then the difficulty of ascertaining how the law of God requires men to act in the multiplied relations of life, which the message suggests, were entirely removed, the question remains as to the duty of obedience to an imperfect law, as all human laws are and must be owing to the present imperfections of mankind. Before men can be absolved generally from their obligation to sustain imperfect laws they must be capable of making a life obeying perfect laws, and when they are created to this high position every man is then a law to himself and needs no written laws for his government.

The conclusion arrived at in this message, and that the doctrines set up of each man being governed by his conscience is subversive of all human government and that he who counsels or incites to the violation or disobedience of a law of the land is guilty of treason against society, public enemy.

The message refers to the subject of the re-organization of the judiciary, has been referred to a committee of able counsellors and states that the report will be laid before the Legislature for its action. The message does not undertake to anticipate the recommendations of the report. We suggested in connection with this subject some time since, that the progress of society now seemed to demand that the Judges of our Judicial Courts should be chosen by the people. We are in favor of this. We like to see the power, as far as practicable return to the people for their exercise, as the safest depository. The Judicial system has behind that of every other department and often trips up the heels of justice by its stiff and mechanical saltiness and its rigid mannerism. A little more life infused into it would do good.

In the discussion of the Railroad enterprises the message expresses more fully than such documents are wont to do the popular mind, and disapproves very forcibly on the necessity of Maine doing something worthy of herself and her resources, and of seizing upon those elements which she has at command to increase the population and wealth of the State. Maine has rusted long, enough! A most unnatural and bitter prejudice has been fostered against manufactures within her borders and against internal improvements, until now the State finds herself, with all her great resources, making but a small pace in progress. Led had it not been for the force of a dire necessity, which often felt in favor of pushing some enterprises even against its premise she would have presented only a shrivelled and withering appearance. We look upon this portion of the message which treats upon the benefits of railroads, the settlement of the public lands and the necessity of doing something to advance the growth of the State as a confession that the policy which has been pursued in Maine by the loco party for the twenty years past, is a failure and has proved injurious to the welfare of the people. There is something hopeful in this view of the subject something encouraging, even though the message neglects to speak directly in favor of the introduction of manufactures and of giving them suitable encouragements. The time is coming—we are sure—for there are frequent progressive of it when the policy, so consonant to an industrious and thriving people, which has made Massachusetts what she is, and which has invigorated New Hampshire and has enriched Connecticut and Rhode Island, will be adopted in Maine. It was a hard thing for the loco leaders in Maine to yield a jot or tittle of the prejudices which they had exerted and by which they had held the reins of power but gaunt necessity stalked up to the door and they must yield, and duly yield to railroad improvements and they must yield to manufactures, and to the policy so long advocated by the whigs, and step by step, as the whig policy is carried out, will the prosperity of the State and people be increased.

It is greatly cheering to us to find this message taking so many correct views with regard to the duty of the State applying itself to an earnest effort to promote the general prosperity of the people. It is a new feature in the state papers of Maine, and, we trust, will be seconded by the appropriate action of the legislature. If so, a portion of the public domain will be devoted to the railroad up the Penobscot river—a new map of the State will be published—the geological survey of the State will be completed,—the hospital for the Insane will be rebuilt, and other enterprises carried through. On the whole it is the most satisfactory message from a loco governor which we have read for a long series of years. In many parts it reads much like a whig document.

☞ The Savannah Republican, of Saturday, contains the great Union speech of Mr Spencer Cobb before an immense assemblage at Sandersville. The following is an extract relative to the action of South Carolina:—For one he hoped that Georgia would give hers to understand, so far as words are concerned, that she need look for no aid or sympathy from this State, in her efforts to overturn the Government. He may regret the course she has marked out; he may even sympathize with her but neither he nor any man ever sympathize with her but neither he nor any man ever sympathize with her but neither he nor any man ever

BOGLE'S AMOLE,

This delightful article totally different and superior to both soap and razor for shaving. The use of it takes away from the razor or soap plan of cutting and leaves the skin in a healthy and natural state. Its vegetable and fragrant properties have a delightful and not lathing effect on the skin—it moistens and allays irritation and has a fine thick creamy lather which does not dry on the face. It has received the highest encomiums of the whole world and thus the use of it among all intelligent people will be general.
